

Regional Banking

Dear Sir / Madam

The provision of banking facilities in regional towns is not just important it is vital.

Where banks close business people are forced to visit the larger centres to do their banking and probably do other shopping while they are there - further eroding the viability of other businesses in their towns.

They visit Coles or Bunnings, the profits of which end up in Wall Street or London. This is not just conspiracy theory - check the share registry of Westfarmers.

Regards

Noel Kitt

Director

Temp Check Systems (Australia) Pty. Ltd.